Guidelines for contributors

Contributions, which must be in English, are welcome from all countries and should be submitted to the editor, both electronically and as a hardcopy. One file and one print-out of every submission must be provided. The electronic version can be attached to an email or sent on a diskette (in pdf, rtf or doc format; .pdf is mandatory if an article contains phonetic characters, graphs, maps, or the like), though in the case of an email attachment it is advisable for authors to get in touch with the editor beforehand to avoid misclassification of a message. The printout, to be sent to the editor in the mail, should have the text on A4 or letter size paper, printed on one side only and numbered consecutively; please note that this manuscript cannot be returned.

At the beginning, after the title of an article and the author's name and affiliation, articles must be followed by a short abstract and a list of five to ten key words; at the end, the author's address should be provided. References, graphs, tables and other illustrations should be presented on separate pages, following the body of the text. Authors are responsible for observing copyright laws when quoting or reproducing material from other sources. For matters of formatting and reference style, please consult earlier issues of EWW as a model and/or ask the editor for an electronic version of our style sheet.

Submission of an article is taken to imply that it has not previously been published and is not being considered for publication elsewhere. If related research is being published elsewhere, this fact must be stated.

Article submissions are peer-viewed, and every effort is made to come to a decision within three to four months after receipt of a manuscript. Final versions of manuscripts accepted for publication must be prepared according to the style conventions described in our style file and must be delivered in doc or rtf format in addition to a hardcopy. Editors and advisers reserve the right to introduce minor cuts and to amend the phrasing and punctuation in all articles and reviews accepted for publication. Authors are requested to check their manuscripts very carefully before submitting them, as modifications at the proofs stage are to be avoided. Reviews are normally commissioned and must be sent in by the given dead-line; they must not exceed the space assigned (normally 1000–2000 words). Contributors of articles and reviews are entitled to one free copy of the issue, and they receive a pdf file of their respective contribution.
