

Guidelines for Contributors

These guidelines apply to all scientific (peer-reviewed) articles submitted to eco.mont

The manuscript must not exceed 30 000 characters (including spaces, title, abstract, keywords, references)

We particularly welcome articles on the following topics:

- reactions of Protected Areas (PAs) towards climate change
- issues of the large carnivores - "return of wildlife and reactions of society"
- management of ungulates - conflicts with forestry
- research on non-symbolic fauna (e.g. insects or bats etc.)
- danger of neophytes in the Alps
- tourist management in parks
- water management and glacier research (also in the context of climate change)
- grazing in PAs
- sustainable land use in inhabited PAs
- ecological constructions and national policies (also for inhabited PAs)
- the translation of the Alpine Convention in the PAs

Contributions should follow a systemic, integrative, synthetic or networking approach with reference to a specific research question. The introduction should briefly and concisely present the research question, scientific background and state-of-the-art for the subject matter treated in the article, with reference to the literature, and should embed the contribution in the scientific context.

In a section on methodology, the methods should be presented which have been used in the research for the article. Standard methods are not described in detail. Special methods are presented by a short summary.

Depiction of results and discussion should be treated separately. Results should also be presented in tables and figures which must be referred to in the text.

In the 'discussion' the results are evaluated and, if possible, compared to other and differing results and interpretations from other studies by other authors, again with reference to the sources in the literature.

The conclusion must correspond to the hypotheses and questions formulated at the beginning and may include an outline of recommendations, future perspectives as well as open questions.
