

PS: Political Science and Politics

PS is the journal of record for the American Political Science Association. The journal provides coverage of the broad range of observations and information about the discipline. Its coverage has evolved since its introduction in 1968 to include critical analyses of contemporary political phenomena by authors working within their own subfields aimed at the informed, general reader.

Editorial Guidelines

Submissions should be manuscripts that have not been published previously and are not under consideration for publication elsewhere. Manuscripts should present issues and analyses of relevance and interest to political scientists with clarity and conciseness. Good writing matters. Qualitative and quantitative manuscripts are welcome. However, manuscripts that are exclusively descriptive or that rely heavily on methodological and statistical presentations are not suitable for publication in this journal. The subjects and methods of articles should be of interest to political scientists reading outside their own field of interest or specialty.

Manuscript Guidelines

Submitted manuscripts are subject to a blind-review process of approximately 2-3 months in length. Authors should send three (3) copies of their manuscripts; none can be returned. The author's or authors' name(s) should appear only on a separate cover sheet, and the first page of the text should include the title of the manuscript. Language within the text that might identify the author(s) should be avoided. A brief biographical note, included on a separate manuscript page at the end of the paper, should identify the author(s) position, institutional affiliation, and related work. Camera-ready copy of all figures, tables, and charts is required and should be presented on separate pages at the end of the manuscript. Materials reproduced from already published work must be accompanied by permission of the original publisher or copyright holder. Manuscripts should include in-text citations that will correspond. Endnotes and references should conform with the APSA Style Manual for Political Science and the Chicago Manual of Style. Manuscripts should be typed double-spaced on one side of 8 1/2" x 11" paper and should not exceed 15 pages in length.

Manuscripts should be accompanied by a 3.5" diskette in Word Perfect or ASCII text format. Gender-specific pronouns used to refer to members of the profession or to society at large should be avoided. The deadlines for information and announcements that customarily appear in the "back" of PS -- People in Political Science [Activities and Appointments, Awards, and In Memoriam]; Association News [including APSA Organized Section News]; Regional and State Association News are seen at right. Individuals or Departments submitting news for People in Political Science are encouraged to submit via email at ps@apsanet.org

Manuscripts submitted for possible inclusion in the "front" of PS -- Symposium; Features; The Teacher; The Profession; and International Political Science -- may be submitted at any time. Except with Symposia submissions and a few extraordinary cases, authors cannot submit manuscripts for inclusion in a particular issue. Accepted and revised manuscripts are customarily printed in the next available issue, themes and page counts permitting.

Authors addressing especially timely and topical subjects are encouraged to contact the editor before submitting their manuscripts. Special provisions can be made to "rush" an article or set of articles through the review process.

Manuscript Processing and Production

Upon submission, the editor makes an initial judgment about the suitability of the manuscript for publication in PS. Suitable manuscripts are sent to a minimum of two reviewers. After reviewers make their recommendations, the editor reaches a final judgment. Every effort is made to limit the review process to three (3) months.

Once accepted, authors are asked to submit a revised final copy of the manuscript. A statement transferring copyright from the author to the American Political Science Association is necessary before publication. The editor will provide the necessary copyright transfer form.

The final copy is copy-edited and returned to the author for final approval. All changes and revisions are incorporated into the manuscript on disk and submitted to the printer.

One set of page proofs is sent to the author. Corrected page proofs should be returned to the copy editor within two (2) days of receipt of the proofs. Every effort should be made to limit corrections to typographical errors. Fees charged for other changes will be the responsibility of the author.

Symposia

Individuals wishing to submit a set of articles for a symposium or to organize a group of scholars on a topic should first consult with the editor about the theme and prospective authors.

The editor may also invite authors to submit articles addressing a single theme or question. Invited articles are also subject to the review process.

Send manuscripts to:

Robert Hauck, Editor, PS: Political Science & Politics
1527 New Hampshire Ave., NW
Washington, DC 20036-1206

With questions please contact the Editorial office at: ps@apsanet.org