

CONTENTS

Contributors

ix

|                                                                                                                             |            |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 1. Mouse Primordial Germ Cells: A Reappraisal                                                                        | 1   |
| Maria M. Mikedis and Karen M. Downs                                                                                         |            |
| 1. Introduction                                                                                                             | 2          |
| 2. Current Model of the Origin of Primordial Germ Cells (PGCs) and Segregation from Soma                                    | 6          |
| 3. Flaws in Current Model of PGC Origin and Segregation                                                                     | 8          |
| 4. Comparison of Mammalian Germline Program to That Across Metazoa                                                          | 31         |
| 5. Embryonic-Extraembryonic Interface and Fetal-Umbilical Connection: PGCs and ACD                                          | 33         |
| 6. Loss/Mislocalization of PGCs and Associated Posterior Defects                                                            | 41         |
| 7. Perspectives                                                                                                             | 44         |
| 8. Conclusions                                                                                                              | 47         |
| Acknowledgments                                                                                                             | 48         |
| References                                                                                                                  | 48         |
| 2. Microtubule Plus-End Tracking Proteins and Their Roles in Cell Division                                           | 59  |
| Jorge G. Ferreira, Ana L. Pereira, and Helder Maiato                                                                        |            |
| 1. Introduction                                                                                                             | 60         |
| 2. Microtubules in Cell Division                                                                                            | 64         |
| 3. Families of Microtubule Plus-End-Tracking Proteins (+TIPs)                                                               | 69         |
| 4. Recognition of Microtubule Plus Ends by +TIPs                                                                            | 89         |
| 5. +TIPs in Mitosis                                                                                                         | 97         |
| 6. Concluding Remarks                                                                                                       | 116        |
| Acknowledgments                                                                                                             | 117        |
| References                                                                                                                  | 117        |
| 3. Unicellular Eukaryotes as Models in Cell and Molecular Biology: Critical Appraisal of Their Past and Future Value | 141 |
| Martin Simon and Helmut Plattner                                                                                            |            |
| 1. Introduction                                                                                                             | 142        |
| 2. What is Special About Unicellular Models                                                                                 | 143        |
| 3. Unicellular Models for Organelle Biogenesis                                                                              | 151        |

|                                                                                                                                                                  |            |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 4. Models for Epigenetic Phenomena                                                                                                                               | 158        |
| 5. Exploring Potential of New Model Systems                                                                                                                      | 175        |
| 6. Epilogue                                                                                                                                                      | 185        |
| Acknowledgment                                                                                                                                                   | 186        |
| References                                                                                                                                                       | 186        |
| 4. Genetic Mechanisms of Allopolyploid Speciation Through Hybrid Genome Doubling: Novel Insights from Wheat (Triticum and Aegilops) Studies | 199 |
| Yoshihiro Matsuoka, Shigeo Takumi, and Shuhei Nasuda                                                                                                             |            |
| 1. Introduction                                                                                                                                                  | 200        |
| 2. Plant Polyploidy and Allopolyploidy                                                                                                                           | 202        |
| 3. Pre- and Postzygotic Barriers in Plant Hybridization                                                                                                          | 213        |
| 4. Unreduced Gametes                                                                                                                                             | 225        |
| 5. Allopolyploid Genome Alteration                                                                                                                               | 235        |
| 6. Concluding Remarks                                                                                                                                            | 242        |
| References                                                                                                                                                       | 244        |
| 5. New Insights into the Role of Plg-R<sub>KT</sub> in Macrophage Recruitment                                                                             | 259 |
| Lindsey A. Miles, Shahrzad Lighvani, Nagyung Baik, Caitlin M. Parmer, Sophia Khaldoyanidi, Barbara M. Mueller, and Robert J. Parmer                              |            |
| 1. Introduction                                                                                                                                                  | 260        |
| 2. The PLG Activation System                                                                                                                                     | 261        |
| 3. General Characteristics of Plasminogen Receptors                                                                                                              | 270        |
| 4. Role of PLG in Macrophage Recruitment In Vivo                                                                                                          | 274        |
| 5. Proteomics-Based Discovery of Plg-R <sub>KT</sub>                                                                                                             | 279        |
| 6. Structure and Distribution of Plg-R <sub>KT</sub>                                                                                                             | 282        |
| 7. Plg-R <sub>KT</sub> and Plasminogen Receptor Functions                                                                                                        | 284        |
| 8. Interplay Among Plasminogen Receptors in Macrophage Migration in Induced Peritonitis                                                                          | 288        |
| 9. Conclusions                                                                                                                                                   | 290        |
| Acknowledgments                                                                                                                                                  | 291        |
| References                                                                                                                                                       | 291        |
| 6. ATP-Binding Cassette and Multidrug and Toxic Compound Extrusion Transporters in Plants: A Common Theme Among Diverse Detoxification Mechanisms         | 303 |
| Tsubasa Shoji                                                                                                                                                    |            |
| 1. Introduction                                                                                                                                                  | 304        |
| 2. ABC Transporters                                                                                                                                              | 305        |

|                                                                |            |
|----------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 3. MATE Transporters                                           | 306        |
| 4. Functions of ABC and MATE Transporters in Plants            | 306        |
| 5. Concluding Remarks                                          | 338        |
| References                                                     | 339        |
| 7. Role of p-21-Activated Kinases in Cancer Progression | 347 |
| Helen King, Nicole S. Nicholas, and Claire M. Wells            |            |
| 1. Introduction                                                | 348        |
| 2. Group I PAK Overview                                        | 348        |
| 3. Group II PAK Overview                                       | 361        |
| 4. Targeting PAKs in Cancer                                    | 371        |
| 5. Concluding Remarks                                          | 373        |
| References                                                     | 374        |
| Index                                                   | 389 |