

Contents

INTRODUCTION • 1

The Gestation of German Biology

CHAPTER ONE • 13

Animism and Organism:

G. E. Stahl and the Halle Medical Faculty

CHAPTER TWO • 37

Making Life Science Newtonian:

Albrecht von Haller's Self-Fashioning as Natural Scientist

CHAPTER THREE • 71

Albrecht von Haller as Arbiter of German Medicine:

Göttingen and Bern (1736-1777)

CHAPTER FOUR • 97

French Vital Materialism

CHAPTER FIVE • 122

Taking Up the French Challenge:

The German Response

CHAPTER SIX • 172

From Natural History to History of Nature:

From Buffon to Kant and Herder (and Blumenbach)

CHAPTER SEVEN • 186

Johann Friedrich Blumenbach and the Life Sciences in Germany:

His Rise to Eminence from the 1770s

CHAPTER EIGHT • 215

Blumenbach, Kant, and the "Daring Adventure"

of an "Archaeology of Nature"

CHAPTER NINE • 245

Carl Friedrich Kielmeyer and "an Entirely New Epoch of Natural History"

CHAPTER TEN • 286

Polarität und Steigerung:

The Self-Organization of Nature and the Actualization of Life

CHAPTER ELEVEN • 318

Naturphilosophie and Physiology

Acknowledgments • 353

Notes • 355

Index of Names • 503

Index of Subjects • 511