

Contents

|                                                                                                         |      |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------|
| Preface: Purpose, Perspective, and Scope                                                         | xiii |
| The Tension and Facilitation Hypotheses of Biotic Responseto Climate Change                         | xiv  |
| Acknowledgments                                                                                  | xxi  |
|                                                                                                     |      |
| 1. A Brief Overview of Recent Climate Change    and Its Ecological Context                  | 1    |
| Climate Change versus Global Warming                                                                    | 3    |
| Temperature Changes                                                                                     | 3    |
| Precipitation Changes                                                                                   | 9    |
| Changes in Snow and Ice Cover                                                                           | 11   |
| El Niño–Southern Oscillation                                                                            | 13   |
| Paleoclimatic Variation                                                                                 | 15   |
| Studying the Ecological Effects of Climate Change                                                       | 16   |
| The Study Site at Kangerlussuaq, Greenland                                                              | 21   |
|                                                                                                     |      |
| 2. Pleistocene Warming and Extinctions                                                           | 24   |
| The Pleistocene Environment As Indicated by Its Fauna                                                   | 24   |
| Biogeography and Magnitude of Pleistocene Extinctions andClimate Change                             | 29   |
| Case Studies of Pleistocene Megafaunal Extinctions                                                      | 35   |
| Pleistocene Microfaunal Extinctions and Species Redistributions                                         | 44   |
| Spatial, Temporal, and Taxonomic Heterogeneity inPleistocene Redistributions: Lessons to Be Learned | 46   |
| Reconsidering the Megafaunal Extinctions: The Zimov Model                                               | 50   |
| Relevance to Contemporary Climate Change                                                                | 52   |
|                                                                                                     |      |
| 3. Life History Variation and Phenology                                                          | 54   |
| Geographic and Taxonomic Variation in PhenologicalResponse to Climate Change                        | 54   |
| Pattern and Scale in Phenological Dynamics                                                              | 59   |
| Phenology and the Aggregate Life History Responseto Climate Change                                  | 64   |

|                                                                                                |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Temporal Dependence and a Model of Phenological Dynamics                                       | 67  |
| The Iwasa-Levin Model and Its Relevance to Climate Change                                      | 75  |
| Modeling the Contribution of Phenology to Population Dynamics                                  | 86  |
| Trends and Statistical Considerations                                                          | 88  |
| Empirical Examples Linking Climate, Phenology,and Abundance                                | 91  |
| More Complex and Subtle Forms of Phenological Variation                                        | 92  |
| 4. Population Dynamics and Stability                                                    | 96  |
| Establishing the Framework for Addressing PopulationResponse to Climate Change             | 97  |
| Classic Treatments of Population Stability Viewed Afreshthrough the Lens of Climate Change | 102 |
| Incorporation of Climate into Time Series Models                                               | 106 |
| Simultaneous Thresholds in Population-Intrinsic andPopulation-Extrinsic Factors            | 111 |
| Population Synchrony and Extinction Risk                                                       | 119 |
| Erosion of Population Cycles                                                                   | 124 |
| Global Population Dynamics, Population Diversity,and the Portfolio Effect                  | 128 |
| 5. The Niche Concept                                                                    | 132 |
| Grinnellian Niches and Climate Change                                                          | 134 |
| Niche Vacancy                                                                                  | 138 |
| Niche Evolution                                                                                | 139 |
| Phenotypic Plasticity and Evolutionary Response toClimate Change                           | 144 |
| Niche Conservatism                                                                             | 146 |
| Modes of Niche Response to Climate Change                                                      | 149 |
| Bioclimatic Envelope Modeling and EnvironmentalNiche Models                                | 155 |
| 6. Community Dynamics and Stability                                                     | 163 |
| Communities Defined through Lateral and Vertical Structuring                                   | 164 |
| Regional versus Local Diversity and the Community Concept                                      | 165 |
| Exploitation and Interference Interactions                                                     | 167 |
| Gleasonian and Clementsian Communities                                                         | 169 |
| Non-analogues: The Community Is Dead—Long Livethe Community                                | 171 |

|                                                                                                                                                 |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| The Role of Climate in Mediating Species Interactions versus the Role of Species Interactions in Mediating Community Response to Climate Change | 176 |
| Phenology and the Ephemeral Nature of Communities                                                                                               | 181 |
| The Green World Hypothesis, and Phenology As an Index of Resource Availability                                                                  | 186 |
| Asynchrony and Trophic Mismatch                                                                                                                 | 187 |
| The Cafeteria Analogy of Trophic Mismatch in Time and Space                                                                                     | 198 |
| Gleasonian Dynamics and Stability in Laterally Structured Communities                                                                           | 200 |
| Dynamics and Stability in Vertically Structured Communities                                                                                     | 203 |
| Development of the Process-Oriented Model for Vertical Communities                                                                              | 205 |
| Derivation of the Predator-Level Statistical Model                                                                                              | 207 |
| Derivation of the Herbivore-Level Statistical Model                                                                                             | 208 |
| Derivation of the Vegetation-Level Statistical Model                                                                                            | 210 |
| The Community Matrix and Its Stability Properties                                                                                               | 211 |
| Trophic Interactions, Dynamic Complexity, and Stability in Vertical Communities                                                                 | 213 |
| 7. Biodiversity, Distributions, and Extinction                                                                                           | 217 |
| Distributional Shifts in Species' Ranges                                                                                                        | 222 |
| Scale and Pattern in Distribution and Abundance                                                                                                 | 224 |
| Biodiversity Changes through Elevational Colonization and Extinction                                                                            | 226 |
| Amphibian Extinction and the Climate-Pathogen Hypothesis                                                                                        | 230 |
| Biodiversity and Stability                                                                                                                      | 233 |
| Tropical Deforestation and Climate Change                                                                                                       | 245 |
| Biodiversity, Climate Change, and Human Exploitation                                                                                            | 248 |
| 8. Ecosystem Function and Dynamics                                                                                                       | 249 |
| Stability, Diversity, and Ecosystem Resilience                                                                                                  | 254 |
| Nutrient, Temperature, and CO <sub>2</sub> Manipulations                                                                                        | 257 |
| Carbon Dynamics and Projected Responses to Global Climate Change                                                                                | 265 |
| Tropical Deforestation, Carbon Turnover, and Model Projections of Changes in Carbon Dynamics                                                    | 276 |
| Role of Animals in Ecosystems of Relevance to Climate Change                                                                                    | 286 |
| Herbivores, Warming, and Ecosystem Carbon Dynamics                                                                                              | 289 |

|                                                                           |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 9. Brief Remarks on Some Especially Important Considerations       | 297 |
| Trends and Variability Revisited                                          | 297 |
| Community Response to Climate Change: Further Considerations              | 299 |
| The Scale-Invariant Nature of Non-analogues                               | 300 |
| Lack of Detection Does Not Always Mean Lack of Response                   | 300 |
| A Greater Emphasis on Phenology                                           | 301 |
| Direct versus Indirect Ecological Responses and the Thiefin the Night | 302 |
| References                                                         | 303 |
| Index                                                              | 359 |