

CONTENTS

|                                  |                                                                                                                                                           |     |
|----------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Preface                   |                                                                                                                                                           | vii |
| Chapter 1                 | Disruption of DNA Methylation Patterns Caused by Exposure to Environmental Factors during the Developmental PeriodKen Tachibana and Ken Takeda | 1   |
| Chapter 2                 | Cytosine Modifications Affect Biological Significance by a Multifactorial NetworkSelcen Çelik-Uzuner                                           | 29  |
| Chapter 3                 | Targeting Aberrant IGF2 Epigenetics as a Novel Anti-Tumor ApproachJi-Fan Hu and Andrew R. Hoffman                                              | 91  |
| Bibliography              |                                                                                                                                                           | 111 |
| Related Nova Publications |                                                                                                                                                           | 191 |
| Index                     |                                                                                                                                                           | 197 |