

"More than simply a textbook or compilation, this volume is nothing short of a handbook for a young and vigorous branch of biology. Authoritative, comprehensive, and up-to-date, it will be an essential book for student and expert alike. Muehlenbein and his contributors have defined human evolutionary biology for the next decade."

PETER T. ELLISON, Harvard University

Wide-ranging and inclusive, this text provides an invaluable review of an expansive selection of topics in human evolution, variation, and adaptability for students of biological anthropology and evolutionary biology.

The chapters are organized around four broad themes, with sections devoted to phenotypic and genetic variation within and between human populations, reproductive physiology and behavior, growth and development, and human health from evolutionary and ecological perspectives.

An introductory section covering topics such as evolutionary theory, demography, and anthropometry provides readers with the theoretical and methodological foundations needed to understand the more complex ideas presented later. Two hundred discussion questions provide starting points for class debate and assignments to test student understanding.

MICHAEL P. MUEHLENBEIN is an Assistant Professor of Anthropology at Indiana University, Bloomington.

"The chapters in this volume provide up-to-date coverage of topics important for evolutionary medicine, and not available elsewhere. Beginners will value their clarity, advanced readers will appreciate the differing perspectives and opinions of individual scientists that reflect the complexity and diversity of the field."

RANDOLPH M. NESSE, University of Michigan

"In this extraordinary volume, a lineup of many of the very best experts the field has to offer guides us through the journey taken thus far and characterizes, in both broad strokes and intricate details within their specialties, where we stand. As heartily, our guides offer principled visions of what lies ahead, as well as how our travels might proceed to get there. The result is a timely collection that inspires as much as it impresses – and it impresses mightily. I recommend the volume to students of human evolutionary biology at all levels."

STEVEN W. GANGSTAD, University of New Mexico

Cover illustrations (left to right):

1. Testosterone. Computer artwork of a molecule of the male sex hormone testosterone © Alfred Pasieka / Photo Researchers, Inc.
2. Human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) © James Cavallini / Photo Researchers, Inc.
3. Brain. Colored three-dimensional magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) scan of a healthy human brain © Zephyr / Photo Researchers, Inc.
4. Woman's face © Helen McArdle / Photo Researchers, Inc.

Cover design by Kraig Downham and Cari M. Lewis

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS
www.cambridge.org

ISBN 978-0-521-70510-3

9 780521 705103 >