

Drawing upon a remarkable 60 years of surveys, this fascinating and richly illustrated book provides an in-depth picture of birdlife in the very heart of England, the area surrounding Banbury which includes parts of Northamptonshire,

Oxfordshire and Warwickshire. The product of annual surveys since 1952, Birds of the Heart of England creates a snapshot of remarkable changes in the distribution of many species through the use of clear colour maps, charts and a variety of illustrations. It will be required reading in the region but its sheer depth of data will make it an important reference for ornithological groups across the country.
