

Contents

Introduction 1

Denis R. Alexander and Ronald L. Numbers

CHAPTER 1. The cultural authority of natural history in early modern Europe 11

Peter Harrison

CHAPTER 2. Biology, atheism, and politics in eighteenth-century France 36

Shirley A. Roe

CHAPTER 3. Eighteenth-century uses of vitalism in constructing the human sciences 61

Peter Hanns Reill

CHAPTER 4. Biology in the service of natural theology: Paley, Darwin, and the Bridgewater Treatises 88

Jonathan R. Topham

CHAPTER 5. Race, empire, and biology before Darwinism 114

Sujit Sivasundaram

CHAPTER 6. Darwin's choice 139

Nicolaas Rupke

CHAPTER 7. Biology and the emergence of the Anglo-American eugenics movement	165
Edward J. Larson
CHAPTER 8. Genetics, eugenics, and the Holocaust	192
Paul Weindling
CHAPTER 9. Darwinism, Marxism, and genetics in the Soviet Union	215
Nikolai Krementsov
CHAPTER 10. Evolution and the idea of social Progress	247
Michael Ruse
CHAPTER 11. Beauty and the beast? Conceptualizing sex in evolutionary narratives	276
Erika Lorraine Milam
CHAPTER 12. Creationism, intelligent design, and modern biology	302
Ronald L. Numbers
CHAPTER 13. The ideological uses of evolutionary biology in recent atheist apologetics	329
Alister E. McGrath
Acknowledgments	353
Notes	355
Contributors	429
Index	435