

This book would not have been possible without the support of Russel H. Meints, Director of the School of Life Sciences, University of Nebraska. He put the resources of the School at our disposal; we were particularly pleased to be able to use the office word processor on a continuous basis. We also thank Ernest R. Stout, Head of the Biology Department at Virginia Tech., for his generous provision of postal and clerical resources in support of this effort.

The original typed material for this book was prepared almost entirely by one person. We are extremely grateful to our typist, Dana J. Wiese, for most of the rough draft and final draft camera-ready copy of the text. Ms. Wiese was also responsible for mass mailings to the contributors and for keeping track of the correspondence between the editors and the contributors. Her reliability, efficiency and unflappable nature were the essential components which kept this book on course. We are also grateful to Karen K. Wiese and Carrie J. Schleiger for taking on emergency typing assignments, often at late hours. For original photographs on page ii, we are indebted to Stephen C. Roemer and William A. Roth, and on page 760 to William V. Glider and Donald W. Phipps, Jr.

Because of the many different sizes and shapes of the pages we reprinted, the layout of the camera-ready copy was complicated. We extend our thanks to both Shelly L. Allen and Sherry L. Allen for their competent handling of this task. A large number of miscellaneous jobs including library work, xeroxing, and pagination were the tasks which occupied nearly a year for Brian S. Fricke and Lori E. Lodes--their capable assistance is gratefully acknowledged. We also wish to thank Michael W. Brogan, who in the final weeks of the project assisted with the pagination and oversaw the reduction in size of certain of the page layouts to provide the final copy. Our acknowledgement of those who contributed to the cover design will be found on page iv. For the printing of this book, we thank Arly Allen and Allen Baker of Allen Press, Lawrence, Kansas.

We also are very grateful for the enormous effort made by Bob and Ruth Hoshaw over a period of many months as they prepared and mailed all the announcements for this book. Assisting them with this task were Richard McCourt, Jen-Chyong Wang and Nina Mauney to whom we express our sincere thanks.

For ideas on the content, for recommendation of certain contributors and for review of the entire contents, we are most appreciative of our Board of Advisors (see page v). They gave freely of their time whenever asked and, if they ever came to the point of dreading the receipt of our packages of chapters, they never let us know it. Their constant flow of suggestions are gratefully acknowledged. We also wish to thank the authors of the reprinted papers and their publishers who gave us permission to reprint their works (specific credits in this regard will be found on pages x and xi). To the selectors of the reprinted papers we extend our thanks, acknowledging that their task was very difficult and that they did not have as much space as they wanted. But we were pleased with their final choices which brought the balance we desired. To the authors of the original introductions and bibliographies we extend our sincere appreciation for their contributions, for their good humor in times of frustration, for living with the difficulties inherent in the time schedule, and for their patience as we communicated with one another.

The review process has been critical to our desire to produce a quality product. Those who have assisted us in this regard by reviewing the original material or who otherwise provided significant suggestions on the content include: Michael C. Amspoker, Dean W. Blinn, A. D. Boney, Michael W. Brogan, Dennis E. Buetow, Kathleen M. Cole, Richard M. Crawford, David B. Czarnecki, W. Marshall Darley, Rene Delépine, John D. Dodge, Gary L. Floyd, Fred W. French, C.
