

*"I have great faith in a seed.
Convince me that you have a seed there, and I am prepared to expect wonders."*

HENRY D. THOREAU

Faith in a Seed is the crowning achievement of a life spent studying nature and nature's laws for their significance to humankind. For years to come, this book will be must reading for lovers of nature and natural history, and for anyone interested in the life and work of Henry D. Thoreau.

"The philosopher of Walden emerges as a dedicated scientific observer... The real treat is for general readers: a chance once again to hear Thoreau's precise, wonderful voice as he roams his beloved woods and finds 'the very earth itself as a granary and a seminary.'"

Publishers Weekly

"Faith in a Seed... is clearly marked by the genius of Thoreau. The pages flash with penetrating insights and wisdom, with his indefatigable curiosity, his probing intellect."

The Washington Post Book World

"...[Thoreau's] poetic and pragmatic appreciation for the unbounded diversity of the earth as granary and seminary is both timeless and more welcome than ever."

Time

"Faith in a Seed can still be read with pleasure, thanks to an editor with a passion for Thoreau, honesty, accuracy, and that rarest of academic editorial traits, modesty. [Brad Dean] has given us a Thoreau we never expected to have and, more to the point, a work that a dying Thoreau could only have dreamed of finishing."

The Boston Globe

"...Thoreau is such a wonderful maker of sentences and metaphors, and he is so effortlessly charming even in this scientific writing that I read it with unflagging pleasure."
