

Advance praise for Invasive Alien Species

"An outstanding summary of the results of Phase I of the Global Invasive Species Programme, this volume presents up-to-date syntheses of important aspects of how to manage this worldwide problem. In ample, well-written chapters, it provides sound advice in areas that range from prediction of invasiveness and practical management to economics and the law. It will reward careful study by all those concerned with these problems!"

—Peter H. Raven, director of Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis

"Another benchmark volume from SCOPE. A comprehensive synthesis of the greatest challenges to biodiversity in the twenty-first century, as the negative synergies of climate change, land transformation, and invasions of ecosystems by aggressive alien species accelerate in the absence of adequate response strategies. This book, elegantly researched and presented in the Island Press tradition, crystallizes the results of over a century of good science and hard lessons that help us understand and combat the negative impacts of invasive alien species."

—Brian Huntley, chief executive, South African National Biodiversity Institute

"No better entree exists for the diverse issues surrounding invasive alien species. This volume charts a coherent way forward, from increased understanding at the scientific level to successful reduction of the unintended harm that results from moving species around the globe. Up-to-date coverage is provided of the biological issues, risk characterization, legal and policy instruments, on-the-ground management, the various ways in which humans are both responsible for and suffer from invasive alien species, and other topics essential to an effective societal response. Finally we have a rigorous volume that unites descriptions of the problems with suggested solutions."

—David M. Lodge, professor of biological sciences, University of Notre Dame

The editors are affiliated with the Global Invasive Species Programme.

Washington • Covelo • London

www.islandpress.org

All Island Press books are printed on recycled, acid-free paper.

Cover design: Mary Mckeen

Cover illustration: iStock International Inc.

ISBN 1-55963-363-8

9 781559 633635

90000

