

A Guide to Dissection in Gross Anatomy is strictly a dissection guide. Rather than describing or illustrating anatomical structures, it directs the student in the dissection of the human body in a logical and useful sequence. Instructions for dissection follow an order that will expose each structure when appropriate that it be seen and understood, without destroying or disturbing overlying or adjacent parts. The Guide indicates the dissection method for each structure and also serves as a checklist by highlighting in italic all anatomical structures to be seen and learned. Its organization by numbered paragraphs allows the instructor to develop a sequence according to particular course requirements, or to omit material he or she does not intend to cover. Ample room is provided on blank pages for notes, so that in addition to its usefulness as a dissection guide, the Guide provides an excellent review at examination time.

"Doctor Woodburne's text is excellent and fulfills all of the purposes which he has detailed. The illustrations are excellent and easy to review. The text is well organized, reads easily and in certain instances, reads like a novel, if that statement can be made for a textbook of anatomy."
