

Advance praise for Bird Migration and Global Change

"An excellent review of the challenges that global climate change poses to migratory birds. This timely and important book provides a valuable perspective and essential science-based foundation for conservation plans that will safeguard the future of land, freshwater, and marine birds."

—FRANK GILL, author of Ornithology

"Whether you believe humans greatly influence global change or not, the world, from melting tundra coastlines in Alaska to disappearing mangroves in the tropics, is rapidly changing. Our migrant birds rely on this global landscape to successfully complete their life cycles, and George Cox's book offers a fascinating, thought-provoking synthesis of the ecological and evolutionary challenges these passing birds face in responding to rapid global changes."

—NILS WARNOCK, Wildlife Specialist, University of California, Davis

"A wonderful and insightful work, Bird Migration and Global Change provides the first accessible and comprehensive guide to the leading conservation concern of our time. Written by a world authority, this definitive work introduces the subject ecologically, physiologically, and geographically in ways that promote clarity and understanding."

—KEITH L. BILDSTEIN, Director, Acopian Center for Conservation Science, Hawk Mountain Sanctuary

"Recent rapid climate change has largely been caused by human activity and affects migratory birds with major consequences for Earth's ecosystems. Bird Migration and Global Change is a thorough and thoughtful treatise on a critical topic, and a much-needed reference work for the conservation community."

—FREDERICK R. GEHLBACH, Professor of Biology, Baylor University

GEORGE W. COX is Professor Emeritus of Biology at San Diego State University and a life-long student of birds and their migrations.

Cover Design: Maureen Gately

Cover Photo: © Alberto Pomares, iStockphoto.com

Washington | Covelo | London

www.islandpress.org

All Island Press books are printed on recycled, acid-free paper.

ISBN 13: 978-1-59726-688-8

ISBN 10: 1-59726-688-4

90000 >

9 781597 266888